

Cell phone use should not be allowed on airborne commercial aircraft (nor by pilots of private aircraft). Commercial aircraft are much too tightly packed with people. It would be a terrible invasion of privacy to have surrounding people talking on cellular phones.

On the other hand, using cell phones for data transmission in flight would be acceptable, as this does not invade other people's personal space and privacy.